

Less than expected rise in the US consumer prices during last month

According to the official data released recently, the Consumer Prices Index (CPI) from the Labor Department rose a seasonally adjusted 0.1% last month, well under the 0.3% rise that had been expected. Petrol prices rose 9.6% in the month; they were still well below the level seen in the same month of 2008.